A Sunday stillness would pervade the great stock yards of our large cities and grass would grow in the streets. One-half the freight trains that plow the continent from ocean to ocean would side track, for there would be nothing for them to do. Fifty per cent of the employes would draw no pay on Satur-day night and our tables would be bare of the greatest, with which they are now that the cow has made to blossom like the rose would revert to the Indians from whence they came and millions of prosperous homes would be destroyed.

It was the cow that made it possible for man to change the great American desert into a land of prosperous and happy homes. When she came the buffalo disappeared, the Indian tepec gave way to the church, schoolbouse and home, and where once the wild wolves howled, to-day children prattle, grass grows, flowers bloom and the birds sing.—By Col. Alabama Was a One-Crop Country. It was until Mrs. Marthis took hold of the farmers. Now there is another story to be told. In the February American Magazine a writer says:

"In sizing up the situation Mrs. Mathis soon uncovered one thing that was radically wrong with Alabama. It was a one crop' country. Everybody seemed to think it would be sacrilege to raise any crop other than cotton. So straightway she became an evangelist of agricultural diffusion.

"This one crop idea is all nonsense," she preached at public meetings—for she had become, by this time, a representative both of the state department of agriculture and the state bankers' association. 'We can raise anything on the face of the earth that will grow in the temperate zone. Here we send to Chicago, St. ouis and Kansas City for our meat, for which we pay from 12 to 30 cents a pound, and we can raise the same meats at home for from two to five cents a pound. Then we send out West and buy hay at $15 to 26 a ton, when we can raise that hay ourselves for $1.50 a ton. Why, we Alabama folks can do more fool stunts to the square inch than any people in America! We work outselves to death to keep from growing hay. We kill the grass to grow the cotton to buy the grass and thus we ride round poverty post on a merry-go-round. To think of our buying corn, when right here in Alabama we have set the world's record for growing corn-2321/4 bushels to the acre! Why, if you folks don't wake up you'll sleep yourselves to death."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was sup-posed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine, manufactured by F. J.
